Mental tests can be divided into two types: achievement tests and aptitude tests. Achievement tests are designed to measure skills and knowledge, particularly those learned in the classroom. The exams required in some places for high school graduation are achievement tests. Aptitude tests try to measure a person's ability to learn new skills or knowledge. For example, aptitude tests can help you decide whether you would do better as a chef or musician. Both tests measure past learning or experience. The difference between them is one of degree and intended use.
